

Press Release—For Immediate ReleaseTaos Names Lucchesi EVP, GM of Managed Services

SAN JOSE, Calif.—January 5, 2010— The San Jose provider of IT services and consulting has appointed Jeff Lucchesi Executive Vice President and General Manager of its Boise-based managed services. Prior to Taos, Jeff was the Senior Vice President of Operations for Corio, one of the early SaaS companies created in the late 1990s, from 2000 to 2004. The company peaked in 2004 supporting over 100 companies using Oracle, SAP, PeopleSoft and Siebel and was sold to IBM in early 2005. Jeff's 25 years of IT experience also includes 10 years serving as the CIO for companies such as DHL and BMHC.

"Having been a long time Taos customer, Jeff came to us with the desire to see Taos as a serious player in the managed services space. Jeff joined Taos in November of 2007 as an Executive IT Management Consultant with Taos' Office of the CIO practice and, from there, led Taos in the creation of remote managed services offerings across infrastructure and end-user services," said Coco Brown, President and COO at Taos.

Although Taos is headquartered in San Jose, California, their managed services operate out of Boise, Idaho. Launched in May 2009, the solution offering immediately generated interest from Bay Area companies due to its ability to provide high quality service at competitive pricing when compared to other offshore solutions. An ideal remote infrastructure management solution, Taos' Managed Services targets small to medium companies throughout the U.S.
