30,819 incidents were reported in 2020 – an 8% increase over the previous year[1]

95% of new IT investments made by government agencies will be made as a service solution by 2025[2]

Federal government recognizes the challenge ahead

Agencies are actively working to update their IT infrastructures. In particular, the Modernizing Government Technology Act of 2018 sets aside funds to replace legacy IT systems, address evolving threats to information security, transition to commercial cloud computing and adopt other innovative commercial platforms.

50%

By 2025, over 50% of government agencies will have modernized critical core legacy applications to improve resilience and agility[3]

Common concerns for agencies

Cybersecurity is a moving target as attack methods evolve and the threat landscape changes
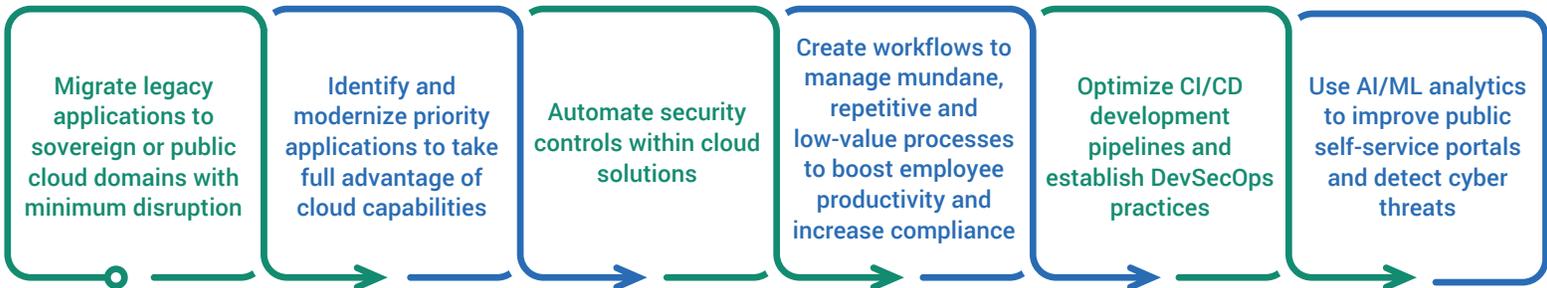

Specialized, complex, interdependent, legacy systems built on outdated technology are especially vulnerable

Compliance with federal rules and regulations regarding data, privacy, and security is mandatory
